In the theory of discrete integrable systems, the classification of lattice equations using the consistency around a cube (CAC) property are well known. The resulting equations are collectively called ABS equations. In this talk, we show new classification of lattice equations using a consistency around a cuboctahedron (CACO) property. This work is based on the collaboration with Prof. Nalini Joshi (The University of Sydney).